Carbon black is the substance that truly turns rubber into a tire, imbuing it with greatly increased tensile strength, thermal protection, and, of course, its characteristic sleek black appearance. In fact, its high tinting strength and stability make carbon black an excellent coloring agent. Precise skill is needed to produce carbon black — temperatures up to 3600° F are required, and timing at each stage of the process must be carefully controlled. The resulting nodules are as small as 15nm, and even agglomerate particles are only 100µm in diameter.
